THE CHRISTIAN, No. 4.

The more we reflect on the peculiar ex cellencies of the Christian Religion, the more we must adore the unbounded goodness of Hist, who deligned it for the falvation of man. What the grand delign of the gospel is, we may learn from the declaration of Heaven itfelf to the great spoille of the Gentiles ; to open our eyes, and to turn them from dark-ness to light, and from the power of Satan unto Goo, that we may receive forgiveness of sina, and an inheritance among there which are contined by faith in Jesus Cueror.

As the reward which the golpel promifes to believers, is not to be obtained in this world, but in that which is to come, it receffarily makes us more folicitous about our eternal welfare, than for oar temporal enjoy ment. Even what the world efuelly calls vir tue will yield to that real and unaffected piesy, which sancisfies us throughout in some and body; which cleanfes all our thought and affectione, and which evinces itself throughout the whole of our lives, by an entire fubmiffion to the will of God and obedience to his commar us.

As the Chriftian's reward is coleftial, al! the precepts, doctrines, promifes and three enings of the golpel are for the promotion piety, the means by which it is to be obtain ed. They enlighten the mind, warm the heart, and purity the affections. In the got pel Goo discovers his goodness, that we may imitate him and his works, that we may glorify him. The gospel implores us to enbrace his crucified Sow, by a lively faith, and to feek for holiness in 11 m; to live godly, rightecusty and soberly in the present world, that we may be made partakers of the jeys which are come.

When our bleffed Lord fojourned upon earth, clothed with the flesh and the fusier-ings of man, the object of all his discourses to the people was to impress upon their mir d the laws necessary for the regulation of their lives, rather than to expound to them incom-prehensible mysteries. His religion reforms the understanding, dislipates error and vice, and hatred; and fheds abroad light and love, purity and peace. It forms on earth a reprefentation of that pure and holy fociety that is perfected in Heaven, & by making us bet ter men, it makes us approach nearer to the angels in holines.

How very different are the meek and doctrines of the gospel, to the absurdities heathen worship. The Priests of Baal wound themselves, and the Chinese penitents expose themselves, half naked, to the inclemency o the weather. But the Christian is simply required to approach the altar of the ever living Goo, with an hamble and a contrite heart ; to bue the Lord who created him ; and his neighbour as himself.

We are taught in the golpel the necessity of living agodly and a holy life, that we may be acceptable in the fight of the Almighty We are to cleanse curseives from all foliutiens of flesh and spirit, and to be holy in all manner of conversation—to be holy as He who hath called us is holy. By the coversation inconsistent with our relationship to the Father, as the commission of actual evil .- A true christian thould adorn his character with the spirit and 'p affice of holines, that the virtue of the Heathens may not put him to fliame. Our bleffed Redeeiner, by his Cror and paffion, proved his right to give laws to a finful world, and he has commanded us to walk as he walked, and to be as he was in the world. Those who rest the hope of their falvation on his fusterings, need no other incentive to a life of piety and holiness, than that it is commanded by their Redeemer. They will not name the name of CHRIST, and live a life of impiety. For an unholy Christian is an apostate from Christ, and lives in direct contradiction to his profession. Although he may not abjure him in acast, yet he denies him in his works.—A proud person renounces his humility; the revengeful his mercy; the lukewarm his zeal; the unclean his next the contract his heavity the revenges. his purity, the covernus his bounty and compathon, and the hypocrite his fincerity .-Can there be any thing more indecent and abfurd, than to pretend to be the disciple of fuch an excellent and holy mafter, and yet by disphedience to deny him? The mere name of Christian will not fanctify those who pollute and defame it. It is not the mere v and detame it. It is not the mere wearing of the livery of Christ that will honour those who stain it by vice, but is an aggravation of their guilt, and proves to the world their desertion from the cause of their master.

l'hole who profess Christianity and yet live in unchristian practices, may deceive them-felves with the presence that they believe in CHRIST, but this presence will be as unprofitable as vain. It is not the calling him, I.ord that will give them admissen into the King-dom of Heaven.

As Jesus Cunter, both by Lis doctrine and his life clearly thowed to us our duty, fo he has kindly offered us the aid of his fpirit for our affilhance, by which the commands of the Gospel are made easy and light. To enforce our obligations he has threatened fuch vengeance to the rebellious, and promifed fuch a reward to the righteous, that it is impolfible we thru'd not be deeply affected with them, if we feriously believe them, and he has given such evidence of their truth, that it is mpolible we should not believe them, unless the God of this world hath clinded our minds. How can a reasonable creature believe that eternal punishment is the certain confequence of fin, and yet live in the wilful practice of it?

As an encouragement to our duty we are provided a reward in the life which is to come, the very expectation of which is a lou-ce of real happinels to this. If the reward was finall, or the promife uncertain. there mig'it be fonie preter ce for not performng the conditions to obtain it. But when the one is infinitely great and the other as true as the God of Truth, what more powerful motive can be conceived to make us he
